Woman sues Webster BJ's Restaurant & Brewhouse over slip and fall

by Keith Loria | November 10, 2010 2:17 pm

A Webster BJ's Restaurant & Brewhouse is being sued by a woman who says that she slipped at the location because there was too much wax on the floor.

Maria Calvillo filed a lawsuit on Nov. 9 in the Harris County District Court against BJ's Restaurant Inc., doing business as BJ's Restaurant & Brewhouse, alleging negligence.

The plaintiff says that on Dec. 5, 2008, she was at the BJ's located at 515 W. Bay Area Blvd. in Webster where the floors were unreasonably slippery and there were no warning signs. She says that she slipped on the hardwood floors and needed surgery as a result of the fall.

The plaintiff is seeking damages including actual damages, medical costs, physical pain and mental anguish in the past and future, court costs and any other damages she is entitled to by the court.

Calvillo is being represented in the case by Houston attorney Stephen Boutros.

Harris County District Court Case No. 2010-74116.

This is a report on a civil lawsuit filed at the Harris County Courthouse. The details in this report come from an original complaint filed by a plaintiff. Please note, a complaint represents an accusation by a private individual, not the government. It is not an indication of guilt, and it only represents one side of the story.
